Northwest-Bound: 10 Family-Friendly Fall Road Trips

In spite of school activities, team sports and social obligations (or maybe because of them) you need a fall vacation. The slower pace, lessened crowds and off-season hotel rates make the post-summer months the perfect time to schedule a weekend out of town with the kids. Here are ten kiddo-approved getaways within a few hours of Seattle. Grab a couple of wool blankets, fill a carafe with hot cider and get ready to hit the road!

Copalis Beach

The only work you'll do during a weekend at Copalis Beach will be drive the two to three hours it takes to get to the beach town a few miles north of Ocean Shores. Rent a cottage at the Tidelands Resort and cook meals at home, or book a cabin at the warm, rustic Iron Springs Resort and share gooey cinnamon rolls prepared by staff on Saturdays in the winter. They're also for sale in the general store during the week. Pack a stack of your kiddo's favorite books and prepare to spend precious time just being together.
